Bio

Sarah Sander '14, soprano
Sarah Sanders is senior Theatre and Comparative Literature double major. When not singing French Impressionist music, she has been involved as an actor, writer, director, and sort-of-scenic-designer in almost 20 theatrical productions during her time at Williams. Earlier this year she completed an Honors Thesis in Theatre for which she wrote and performed a solo cabaret show as Margaret of Anjou, who was Queen of England during the Wars of the Roses. Sarah is also a proud member of Good Question a cappella at Williams. She studies voice with Kerry Ryer-Parke, and sends her the biggest thanks for these years!

Bio

Maia McCormick '14, mezzo-soprano
Maia McCormick is a music major originally from New York City. Her primary focus is choral conducting, which she has studied both at Williams and at the Conservatorium van Amsterdam. Her conducting positions on and around campus include: co-director of the Williams College Elizabethans (a Renaissance chamber group); student conductor of the Concert Choir; and conducting assistant to the Bennington Children's Chorus. When not making music, Maia can be found contradancing, asking people about their stories, and punning. She hopes to pursue a career in choral conducting, music education, or music administration.
